Lord God of All

WE PRAY to Thee for the boys and the girls that are today on our playgrounds and in our recreation centers and that are to be our future presidents, senators, representatives, governors, mayors.

We pray to Thee for the boys and girls who are to be our leaders in our United Nations world government.

We pray to Thee to help us see all that these boys and girls need to grow daily in stature and wisdom, in strength and joy, to prepare themselves for leadership in this Thy world.

We thank Thee for this Land of Promise in which we and they live, for its freedom, its security, its abundance of material things, its spiritual heritage.

We thank Thee that the people of this country, through their government, provide playgrounds, swimming pools, bathing beaches, skating ponds, baseball fields, recreation centers for the children; that there is provision in so many communities for all who will to share in music, art, drama, nature, sport.

We pray to Thee that we may ever keep within us the spirit of abundant living, the spirit of gracious living, of good fun, that we may keep this Thy world a joyous place, where it is easy to be happy in free time.

We pray to Thee that we may be good comrades, that in our leisure we may live together as good neighbors, that we may think of ourselves as brothers, children of a common Father.

We pray to Thee that together we may build a world of strength and joy that the leaders of the next generation may find satisfying and a world to which they desire to give their best and all they have to give, because life itself seems to them all so rare and beautiful a thing—all this we pray in Thy name—

Lord God of All.

The Recreation Year Book

THE RECREATION YEAR BOOK is a record of community recreation programs, facilities and services in American towns, cities and counties. It includes reports of recreation agencies that (1) operate playgrounds, recreation buildings, indoor centers, camps or community-wide recreation programs under paid leaders or (2) operate for community use such facilities as golf courses, bathing beaches or swimming pools. Most of the reports are from municipal authorities, but some are from private organizations that furnish community-wide recreation programs.

The YEAR BOOK does not record all types of recreation service. It does not include, for example, such park facilities as zoos, conservatories, and properties designed primarily for beauty rather than for active use. Omitted, too, are reports of school recreation programs provided exclusively for children enrolled in the school. Recreation programs of volunteer agencies are included only if they are equally available on a community basis to members and non-members alike.

The expenditures data cover only funds spent for the recreation services recorded in the YEAR BOOK. These figures are not to be confused with the "Recreation" expenditures in the reports issued by the U. S. Bureau of Census, which include expenditures for municipal parks, museums, community celebrations, band concerts, and street trees, as well as for the non-school recreation facilities and services reported in the YEAR BOOK.

The YEAR BOOK, containing as it does a record of the expenditures, facilities, personnel, and services of recreation agencies in most cities, affords a guide to the growth and development of the community recreation movement. The tables indicate the managing authorities in the cities reporting and the extent to which they employ full-time year-round leaders. The information on expenditures can be used to advantage in submitting and supporting requests for recreation budgets. The YEAR BOOK enables public authorities or other interested persons to compare in several respects their city's provision for recreation with that of other cities of the same population or in the same state and with accepted standards. In short, it provides the only available source of information as to the status, scope, and services of community recreation agencies in American cities.

Local recreation authorities have given evidence of their loyalty to the recreation movement and their appreciation of the value of the YEAR BOOK by submitting reports again this year. Several state authorities cooperated by furnishing information that was helpful in securing reports of local recreation programs and facilities. The National Recreation Association wishes to express its appreciation to the community recreation leadership of America for its hearty cooperation in the preparation of this important service project.

Community Recreation in 1946

During 1946 recreation gained a wider recognition than ever before as a significant factor in community life in America. Except for a limited report for 1944, detailed information concerning community recreation programs and facilities is available through the Recreation Year Book for the first time since 1942. Figures presented in the Year Book indicate the nature and extent of community recreation developments during the year and reveal trends in the recreation movement since the end of World War II.

More agencies and communities are represented in the Year Book for 1946 than in any previous issue. Reports were submitted by 1,530 municipalities*—cities, towns, counties and school districts—representing every state in the Union as well as Hawaii and Canada. They record recreation services and facilities in 1,743 communities, as rendered by 1,790 agencies. These figures do not fully record the extent of community recreation in 1946, however, because nearly 300 cities that submitted reports for 1944 failed to respond to requests for information as to their service in 1946. Most of them are known to have conducted programs during the year. Furthermore, in many of the cities that did report, there are recreation agencies that submitted reports for previous Year Books but did not do so for 1946. It is clear, therefore, that the number of communities with some form of recreation service is far in excess of 2,000.

The marked increase in the number of cities reporting recreation leadership and facilities is evidence of an expanding interest in community recreation throughout the country since the war. To a large extent the increase is due to the number of small communities that for the first time employed recreation leaders and furnished programs on a community basis. Even though recreation expenditures in these communities were relatively small and their programs and facilities were limited, it is significant that the need for recreation is increasingly recognized in the small towns as well as in the larger cities of America.

Following are a few of the major trends and developments in 1946 as revealed by the Year Book figures.

Leadership. Because leadership is essential to effective recreation service, it is encouraging that 20 per cent more cities reported paid leaders in 1946 than in the preceding Year Book. The total number of paid leaders, 41,159, is also the largest number ever reported. Full-time year-round workers were employed by 638 cities or 30 per cent more than ever before reported such workers. A further evidence of the increase in the employment of full-time leadership in 1946 is the fact that approximately 80 cities employed their full-time personnel after the beginning of the year. Although most of these cities employed only one or two full-time leaders, many of them had never before employed personnel on this basis.

The extent to which leadership is still employed on a part-time or seasonal basis is indicated by the fact that only one in eight leaders served full time the year round. Approximately one-third of all full-time leaders are employed in the ten largest cities. Forty per cent of the cities employing full-time leadership report only one such worker, whereas 75 per cent employ four or less. In spite of the fact that 148 more cities employed full-time leadership in 1946 than in 1944, the increase in the total number of such leaders was less than 6 per cent.

The Year Book figures reveal the great contribution which volunteers are making to recreation in localities. The total number of volunteers, 65,992, is far greater than reported in any previous year. For a number of years the number of volunteers has increased more rapidly than the number of paid workers, in 1946 becoming 60 per cent greater than the employed personnel. The women slightly outnumber the men.

Playgrounds and Centers. Communty recreation programs in a large number of cities are built around the outdoor playgrounds and the buildings and centers used for indoor activities. It is therefore significant that in 1946 more playgrounds were reported conducted under leadership in more cities than ever before. Two out of three of these

*In the tables that follow the term "cities" is applied to all types of municipalities.

In addition, reports were received from the following cities too late to be listed in the tables and the information in them was not included in the summary figures: Jacksonville Beach, Florida; Waynesboro, Georgia; Bardstown, Kentucky; Anoka, Minnesota; Winnemucca, Nevada; Kings Park, New York; Saratoga Springs, New York; Greensboro, North Carolina; Warren, Pennsylvania; Winnsboro Mills, South Carolina; Lyndonville, Vermont and Brantford, Ontario.

playgrounds were open under leadership only during the summer months, and year-round playgrounds were operated in only 21 per cent of the cities reporting. Although a number of cities reported the closing or curtailment of their programs due to epidemics during the summer of 1946, the total attendances at playgrounds for the year approximated 300,000,000.

More indoor programs at buildings and centers under leadership were reported in 1946 than in any previous year. On the basis of the average attendance reported, approximately 95,000,000 visits were made to these buildings and centers during the year. The decrease in the number of teen or youth centers may indicate that less emphasis was given to the provision of facilities to teenagers as a special group than during the late war years.

An analysis of the extent to which facilities on school property were used for community recreation, based on data gathered for the first time since 1937, reveals the contribution school authorities are making to community recreation, especially in residential neighborhoods. As a result of the growing acceptance by school authorities of the principle that school facilities are also community recreation resources, in many cities, playground, indoor and athletic programs are carried on largely upon school property. Reports also show that a large percentage of school facilities are made available to the recreation authorities without charge or on payment of custodial fees only.

Facilities. Outdoor facilities such as swimming pools and beaches, golf courses, sports fields, ice skating rinks and courts for a variety of games attract participants and spectators in large numbers. Most of these facilities are more numerous and are reported by more cities in 1946 than ever before. Golf courses, however, are fewer because a number of park departments which formerly submitted reports of such facilities failed to do so in 1946. Tennis courts, softball diamonds, horseshoe courts, baseball diamonds and picnic centers, in the order named, are most numerous; more cities report softball and baseball diamonds than any other facility.

Many authorities do not keep a record of the people using these special facilities, but those reporting show total attendances exceeding 325,000,000 for the year. Swimming facilities again top the list. The increasing tendency of recreation authorities to extend the usefulness of their facilities by the installation of lights to permit evening play is confirmed by the reports of lighted facilities, especially softball diamonds, athletic fields and game courts.

Administration. The YEAR BOOK has special value in a period of expanding recreation programs as an index to the form of authority under which community recreation programs are established and administered. The separate recreation department has become increasingly predominant as the type of local governing authority for recreation. More than 40 per cent of all the governmental agencies reporting recreation in 1946 administer recreation as a special function. Park authorities are fewer than in 1944, as many known to provide facilities in 1946 failed to submit a report. School authorities, though outnumbered by the park agencies, are more numerous than in 1944; more than one-half of the additional cities are in the State of Washington, where school-sponsored programs were encouraged by the use of state funds. In addition to the special recreation, park and school authorities, recreation programs were reported administered by 263 public agencies of other types.

Reports indicate that a large percentage of the year-round recreation programs established since 1944 are administered by separate recreation departments. Two-thirds of all the governmental agencies employing full-time year-round leaders in 1946 were separate recreation departments; less than one-fifth were park departments, and only one out of twenty were school authorities. Reports further show that separate recreation departments are, for the most part, administered by policy-making boards or commissions. Advisory boards are less numerous, while only 10 per cent of the separate recreation departments function without some form of official citizen group.

Private organizations comprise 390 of the 1,790 agencies whose work is recorded in the YEAR BOOK. Their number is much greater than in recent years; in many of the smaller communities where recreation programs have been established since the war, the service is administered by a private group, in some cases in cooperation with a public authority.

Finance. The growth of the movement is further indicated by the increase in the money spent for recreation in 1946. The total expenditures of $51,785,090 are one-third greater than ever before recorded, except from federal relief funds. When the value of contributed services is taken into account, the amount spent for recreation in 1946 exceeded $54,000,000. Rising salaries, coupled with the increase in the employment of leaders, resulted in a record total for leadership salaries of nearly $20,000,000.

Renewed postwar activity in the acquisition and development of recreation properties is reflected in the mounting expenditure for land, buildings and permanent improvements. This exceeded $8,000,000, or more than was reported in any year since 1931. A similar trend is noted in the bond issues for recreation voted during 1946, which total more than $22,000,000 and approximate the record amount voted in 1928.

Local tax funds continued to be the chief means of financing community recreation programs. Such funds were reported in eight out of ten of the communities reporting, although in many communities they were supplemented from private sources. Private funds were made available for recreation in a much larger number of communities than in recent years; in one out of every ten communities reporting, the program was financed entirely from private sources.

In 1946 state funds were an important factor in financing community recreation programs in a few states. Youth funds in New York State and school funds in Washington and Pennsylvania, for example, supplemented monies raised locally in many communities in these states. The total amounts reported spent from state sources, however, were only slightly more than one-half a million dollars. Fees and charges again in 1946 supplemented income from governmental and private sources. Total amounts received from this source represent less than one-fifth of the total amount spent for recreation during the year.

Activities. The contribution which local recreation agencies make to rich and satisfying living is suggested by the table indicating the number of cities that reported on 75 activities commonly included in recreation programs. Games and sports again predominate, with softball and baseball heading the list, followed by basketball, horseshoes and volley ball in the order named. The large number of cities reporting arts, handcrafts, music, drama, dancing, hobbies and other types of activities demonstrate the wide variety of interests served through the recreation program. Two hundred and sixty-four (264) cities report special activities for old people—a feature included on the YEAR BOOK form for the first time.

Leadership

In 1946, more men and women paid from local funds were employed for leadership in community recreation programs, and in a larger number of cities, than ever before. Their total number, 41,159, represents an increase of nearly 16 per cent over 1944, the highest previous year.

Of the leaders reported, 5,147 were employed on a full-time, year-round basis. These leaders number 277 more than in 1944 and were reported by 148 more cities. The men outnumber the women in both part-time and full-time leadership, reflecting the return to normal peace-time conditions since 1944, when a higher percentage of leaders in both categories were women.

The number of cities with paid and volunteer leadership is actually greater than is indicated in the tables, since county and other authorities that furnish leadership to more than one community were counted only once.

Paid Recreation Leaders

Total leaders employed full-time year-round (648 cities)	5,147

*This figure includes 2,179 leaders whose sex was not designated.

Volunteers

The number of men and women giving volunteer service to community recreation agencies in 1946 total 65,992, as reported by 875 cities. Again, the figures are larger than ever before reported. The men serving as activity leaders slightly outnumber the women, but more women than men served in other capacities.

	Activity Leaders	Other Volunteers	Total Volunteers
Men	15,622 (691 cities)	15,567 (490 cities)	31,189
Women	14,847 (605 cities)	19,502 (462 cities)	34,349
Total	30,469	35,523	65,992 (875 cities)

This figure includes 454 leaders whose sex was not designated.

Playgrounds, Buildings and Indoor Centers

Outdoor Playgrounds

The total number of outdoor playgrounds reported conducted under leadership in 1946 was 11,559 in 1,337 cities. The number of playgrounds and of reporting cities is larger than ever before. More than 60 per cent of the playgrounds were reported lighted for night use.

The total 1946 attendances of 258,275,738 at 10,172 playgrounds are lower than were recorded for any year since 1935. This decrease is explained, at least partially, by the fact that in a number of cities the playgrounds were closed during part of the summer because of infantile paralysis. Even so, this attendance total represents an average of 25,000 per playground reporting. The average daily summer attendance of participants is 28 per cent higher than in 1942, the last year when this information was requested. The number of spectators shows a striking increase.

The formula for reporting attendance recommended by the Records Committee was used in 226 cities in 1946, indicating an increasing acceptance of this formula by local playground authorities.

Number of outdoor playgrounds (1,337 cities)		11,559
Open year round (287 cities)	2,596
Open during summer months only (1,224 cities)	7,551
Open during other seasons (269 cities)	1,412
Number of lighted playgrounds (509 cities)		7,121
Average daily summer attendance of participants (7,994 playgrounds in 1,095 cities)		1,632,268
Average daily summer attendance of spectators (5,659 playgrounds in 704 cities)		1,010,835
Total attendance of participants and spectators at playgrounds during periods under leadership (10,172 playgrounds in 1,116 cities)		258,275,738

Recreation Buildings

The number of recreation buildings reported open under leadership is also larger than any previously recorded. The total of 1,832 such buildings surpasses by 34 the previous record number reported in 1941. The attendance recorded at 1,387 buildings was 45,729,427. The average attendance of 32,970 per building during the year is considerably lower than that in previous years, but this is not surprising in view of the fact that 1946 reports were received from a greatly increased number of very small communities.

Total number of recreation buildings (547 cities)	1,832
Total yearly or seasonal attendance (1,387 buildings in 413 cities)	45,729,426

Indoor Centers

Buildings not used primarily for recreation activities, but in which a program was carried on under leadership, were reported by 793 cities, more than twice the number reporting such facilities in 1942. The total number of indoor centers reported in 1946 is 4,021. An attendance of 21,857,263 was recorded for 2,546 centers, or an average of 8,585 per center. As in the case of the recreation buildings, this represents a reduction from the average attendance figures for 1942.

Total number of indoor recreation centers (793 cities)	4,021
Total yearly or seasonal attendance (2,546 centers in 518 cities)	21,857,263

Teen Centers

Special "teen" or youth center facilities totaling 1,659 were provided in 578 cities, as compared with 1,813 centers in 595 cities in 1944. These youth facilities were provided in the recreation buildings or indoor centers reported in the preceding paragraphs. The reported attendances of over 9,000,000 at 983 centers indicate their popularity.

Total number of teen centers (578 cities)	1,659
Total yearly or seasonal attendance (983 centers in 405 cities)	9,033,611

Recreation Facilities

The reports submitted show few significant changes in the extent to which various recreation facilities were provided in 1946. The totals for most of these facilities are somewhat higher than in 1942, the last year in which information regarding most of them was requested. This is undoubtedly due to the increase in the number of communities reporting. A change in the definition of an athletic field on the report blank, as compared with previous years, accounts for the enormous increase in the number of athletic fields reported. The failure of several park departments to submit a report for 1946 explains the decrease in the number of golf courses.

Attendance figures for 1946 again reveal the wide popularity of outdoor recreation activities. The total number of swims at pools and beaches exceeded 168,000,000. Softball and baseball diamonds and athletic fields attracted more than 77,000,000 in the cities reporting attendance. Although several authorities reported their wading pools closed for part of the season because of an epidemic, attendances in excess of 7,000,000 attest the popularity of this facility. Most cities do not keep a record of the people using such facilities as handball, horseshoe or shuffleboard courts.

The number of each facility reported, the number lighted for night use, and the total attendance at facilities where the number of users is recorded are indicated in the following table.

Use of School Facilities

Information concerning the use of school facilities in community recreation programs was requested for the first time since 1937. The reports received indicate that 44 per cent of the total number of playgrounds reported, 51 per cent of the athletic fields, and 79 per cent of the indoor recreation centers were located on school property. Non-school recreation agencies furnished the leadership for community programs at many of these facilities.

The total number of each facility reported and the conditions of use, where these were stated, are listed in the following table. The figures in parentheses indicate the number of cities reporting each item.

		Conditions of Use

Management

Many types of agencies provide or administer community recreation facilities and programs, but a large percentage of them are governmental agencies. Of the 1,790 whose 1946 recreation service was reported, 1,400 are administered by public authorities. Several cities have two or more community recreation agencies; on the other hand, some of the agencies reporting, especially county authorities, provide recreation service in several communities. The YEAR BOOK for 1946 contains reports of 231 more public and private agencies than any previous issue.

The authorities that administer recreation as a separate function outnumber the combined park and school authorities, who are the next most numerous public agencies. Fewer park authorities submitted reports than in any year since 1940; school agencies, on the other hand, show a marked increase in number. Private agencies number 390, or 48 per cent more than in 1944.

Agencies Reporting Full-Time Year-Round Leaders

A large percentage of all community year-round recreation service is provided by agencies that employ one or more leaders on a full-time basis. These agencies numbered 696 in 1946 as compared with 535 in 1944, thus indicating a marked extension of year-round programs.

The separate recreation department is the predominant type of authority in the administration of year-round programs, as evidenced by the fact that 374 or 66 per cent of all the public agencies employing full-time leadership, are separate recreation departments. Park authorities, numbering 110, are next in number; only 29 school departments reported full-time year-round leadership. Comparatively few park and school authorities provide such leadership, whereas 65 per cent of all the separate recreation departments employed one or more full-time year-round leaders in 1946.

Of the 390 private agencies reporting, 128 had full-time leaders in 1946. Nearly three-fourths of these agencies were playground and recreation associations or committees, community building or center boards or agencies providing special programs for youth.

Municipal Authorities

The forms of municipal recreation administration in the cities reporting recreation service in 1946 are summarized as follows:

Finances

A total of $51,785,090 was reported expended for community recreation facilities and services in 1,488 cities in 1946. This exceeds by nearly $13,000,000 the largest amount spent from local funds in any previous year. The sum paid for leadership was also larger than ever before recorded, representing 45 per cent of the current expenditures. The capital expenditures were greater than in any year since 1931.

Bond issues were reported by 47 authorities, and the issues totaled $22,120,431. This figure is larger than that reported for any previous year since 1928, when a record high of $22,517,343 was established.

It should be pointed out that a number of recreation agencies submitting reports for the YEAR BOOK, especially park departments, do not record their expenditures in such a way that they can readily segregate the funds spent for the recreation program, facilities and services reported in the YEAR BOOK. As a result, either the amounts they report are incomplete or expenditures data are not reported. Otherwise the total expenditures would be considerably greater than indicated in the table below.

The following table shows the amount spent for recreation during 1946, classified as to type of expenditure. The figures in parentheses indicate the number of communities in which the funds were expended.

Expenditures

Land, Buildings and Permanent Improvements	$ 8,012,517	(524)
Upkeep, Supplies and Incidentals	8,574,526	(1,211)
Salaries and Wages for Leadership	19,862,869	(1,302)
Total Salaries and Wages	28,242,893	(1,259)
Total Expenditures for Recreation in 1946	51,785,090	(1,488)

In addition to the amounts listed above, 542 cities reported that services such as heat, light or maintenance of facilities were contributed by agencies other than the one reporting. The total estimated value of these services in 457 cities was $2,256,332.

Sources of Support

Municipal funds again in 1946 were the chief means of financing community recreation service. In more than 80 per cent of the cities reporting, the program was financed in whole or in part from municipal funds. The number of cities reporting private recreation funds was much greater than in previous years. In many of the cities reporting youth centers and of the smaller communities submitting reports for the first time, private funds were used—in many cases to supplement municipal or state funds.

Because state funds were available for community recreation use in a few states, cities were asked for the first time to report the amount received from this source. Most of the 139 cities that reported state and provincial funds totaling $526,263 were in the states of New York, Washington and Pennsylvania.

A total of two and one-half million dollars was reported secured from school funds in 343 cities. This amount is approximately the same as reported spent from this source in 1942 in only 235 cities.

The following table indicates the sources of funds spent in the cities for which reports were received. Since in several cities more than one agency reported, and since some agencies serve several cities, separate figures are given for the number of cities and the number of agencies.

Source of Support	Number of Cities	Number of Agencies
Municipal Funds Only	874	1,045
Municipal and Private Funds	380	314
Private Funds Only	179	228
County Funds Only	116	27
Municipal and State Funds	83	93

Municipal and County Funds	20	6
Municipal, County and Private Funds	12	5
Miscellaneous Public and/or Private Funds	23	22
	1,743	1,790

The following table indicates three main sources of recreation funds. Money secured from appropriations and other public funds represents more than 83 per cent of the total, the source of which was reported. More than 12 per cent of the total was derived from fees and charges spent directly by the recreation agencies collecting them. The balance, secured from private funds, represents less than 5 per cent of the total.

	Amount	Per Cent of Total	Number of Cities
Taxes and Other Public Funds	$41,343,267	83%	1,270
Fees and Charges	6,057,436*	12%	516
Private Funds	2,288,947	5%	534

*This amount represents only funds expended directly by the recreation agencies collecting them. In addition, fees and charges totaling $3,117,636 were collected by 196 communities and turned over to local city and county treasuries. Thus the total amount of fees and charges collected during 1946 was $9,175,072, or more than 18 per cent of the money spent during the year.

Bond Issues

Forty-six cities and one county reported bond issues for recreation passed in 1946 totaling $22,120,431. Municipalities reporting and the amounts passed are listed below.

Special Recreation Activities

A great diversity of activities is found in the programs of recreation departments throughout the country, and they cover a wide range of leisure time interests. The 75 activities in the following list, however, represent the types commonly included in community recreation programs. Games and athletic sports head the list again in 1946, comprising eight of the ten activities reported by the largest number of cities. In order of rank, these activities are: softball, baseball, basketball, horseshoes, volley ball, tennis, swimming, handcrafts, table tennis, and storytelling. Since 1942, basketball has replaced tennis in third place, and table tennis and storytelling appear on the top list for the first time.

All the activities that have been previously reported show an increase over 1942, with the exception of gardening and roque. Touch football was reported by 77 per cent more cities, and badminton by 62 per cent more than in 1942. Growing interest in music, dancing, and drama was evidenced by the marked increase in the number of cities reporting various forms of these activities. Social dancing was reported by 78 per cent, and square dancing, other instrumental groups, and festivals by more than 60 per cent more cities than in 1942.

Figures on participation were not requested, so no information is available as to the extent to which people took part in these activities.

Services Made Available Through The National Recreation Association in 1946

6,385 different communities in every state of the Union, the District of Columbia, and 40 foreign countries received help and advice on their recreation problems through the Correspondence and Consultation Bureau. 26,814 requests were handled by the Bureau and 3,822 individuals called at the office for personal service.

781 cities were given requested service through the visits of field workers. Many cities were visited several times during the year.

12,000 local leaders were given special training in recreation skills, methods and programs at institutes held in 92 cities in 26 states in which social recreation, playground activities and games were stressed.

39 cities in 15 states received special field service in connection with their plans to strengthen and develop their services in arts and crafts. In 14 of these, special training institutes were conducted for employed and volunteer leaders.

9,700 rural leaders attended 54 institutes held in 15 states conducted under Association auspices.

43 states were helped with their state recreation problems and services. Four field workers, 3 full-time and 1 part-time, were assigned to help state government agencies active in recreation.

123 cities received requested field service by the staff of the Bureau of Colored Work. 4,310 employed and volunteer leaders attended training courses conducted for workers with colored people. In addition to the staff of the Bureau of Colored Work, 4 of the Association's other specialists helped at some of the institutes held.

42 cities received the personal services of the Specialists on Recreation Areas and Facilities and Recreation Buildings.

10 community-wide appraisals of recreation administration, personnel and facilities were completed in 1946. In addition, 8 cities were serviced with limited studies for special purposes and 16 brief studies were made of local resources and needs as a basis for immediate operation of recreation programs. In 4 cities, community studies of recreation for colored people were prepared.

47 cities were given personal service on nature, gardening and camping activities. In 19 of these cities training courses were conducted. Service was also given to staff members responsible for nature recreation and camping programs in 5 state agencies.

72 industrial plants were visited in 32 cities by a special worker to help industries and municipal recreation departments meet the recreation needs of workers.

3,884 boys and girls received badges, emblems or certificates for passing the Association's athletic and swimming badge tests.

1,257 leaders in communities which do not have year-round programs received the 16 issues of the Summer Playground Notebook. 1946 was the fourth consecutive year for this service. This has helped to lead some of the cities to work actively for year-round recreation programs.

91 cities were assisted through personal visits by the Katherine F. Barker Memorial Field Secretary for Women and Girls. In 23 of these communities, training courses were conducted for 2,270 local leaders, both paid and volunteer, many of them having responsibility for organizing and conducting recreation programs for women and girls.

2,700 cities, towns and villages participated in the 23rd annual observance of National and International Music Week.

2,259 communities (including cities in 28 foreign countries and 54 Canadian cities) received RECREATION, the monthly magazine of the movement.

5,867 individuals in 2,997 communities received the Bulletin Services issued by the Association. The Association's publications were more widely used in 1946 than ever before. A number of new publications were issued. Many of the Association's publications were revised and re-issued.

1,068 delegates from 370 cities in 39 states and Canada attended the 28th National Recreation Congress to exchange information and experience.

An increasing number of small communities showed interest in establishing or expanding playground and recreation programs. Because the number of such communities throughout the country is so great, the bulk of assistance was given through correspondence. Every National district field worker gave requested on-the-ground service to such communities. In addition, 111 such communities in 31 states were served either through correspondence or special field visits by special workers assigned to the Association's service to small communities. All of this service was in addition to that regularly given to smaller communities by the Correspondence and Consultation Bureau at National Headquarters. So far as the manager of the Field Department knows, all requests for field visits from communities, however small, were cared for. For part of the year the time of 2 workers was set aside for such visits.

James Edward Rogers Honored

THE TWENTY-FIRST anniversary meeting of the Society of State Directors of Health and Physical Education held in Seattle, Washington, in April, was dedicated to James Edward Rogers, "Founder and Inspirer." Mr. Rogers was awarded an honorary life membership in the Society and was presented with a certificate of appreciation for his work in the establishment and development of state programs of health and physical education and for his many valuable contributions to the profession. The Society of State Directors of Health and Physical Education was organized by Mr. Rogers when he served as Director of the National Physical Education Service of the National Recreation Association.

As a member of the field staff of the National Recreation Association for the past 35 years, James Edward Rogers has given outstanding service in community recreation. During World War I he was Director of Training for War Camp Community Service and continued in this capacity for many years for the National Recreation Association. A very large number of outstanding recreation workers attended the six-week training courses held in Chicago by Mr. Rogers. His work in the field of training professional and volunteer workers for community recreation has included not only Association institutes but courses given in universities and colleges. James Edward Rogers is affec-

"MAD OR MUDDLED"

This 196 page introduction to the above, separately published at $2.00, explains how we got that way as the result of mis-information and mis-education, and how higher education has come under the control of our financial hierarchy.

"The illumination is so revealing that I am no longer muddled," Franklin Bobbitt, U. of Chicago. "Brings mental stimulation and many a hearty chuckle," Frank H. Hankins, Smith Coll. "Interested and enthralled, captivated and stirred-up by your writing. A distinct and important contribution to education in our time," Vinal H. Tibbetts, Am. Ed. Fellowship. "No one I know of is giving the data and evidence of this great subject as clearly as you are," Francis Neilson, Chicago. "You are the most stimulating writer on education and related problems and fields," Louis Adamic, N. J. "Refreshing to find someone whose perspective of the vital problems of education is so close to my own," Comfort A. Adams, Pa. "Calculated to rock the chairs of educators from coast to coast," Boston Herald.

Social Work Year Book 1947

Russell Sage Foundation, 130 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y. $3.50.

THIS EDITION of the Social Work Year Book is the ninth in the series begun in 1929 and continued on a biennial basis since 1933. It includes 79 authoritative articles on as many different topics, and a directory of 72 national government agencies in the United States whose functions are within or closely related to the field of social work, as well as a directory of 442 national and international voluntary organizations in the United States. The volume is carefully indexed. Among the topical articles included is a statement on Recreation by Howard Braucher, President of the National Recreation Association, and similar articles by other authorities in related fields such as boys' and girls' work organizations, camping, community organization, day care of children, housing and city planning, interracial and intercultural activities, juvenile behavior problems, settlements and neighborhood houses, volunteers, and youth services. The Social Work Year Book is an invaluable reference work for all leaders in recreation and other community services.

Public Agency—Council Relationships

Bulletin No. 290. Community Chests and Councils, Inc., 155 East 44th Street, New York 17, N. Y. December 1946. 75¢.

THIS STUDY is of definite current value to public as well as private recreation workers because of the present need for close planning and operating relationships between governmental and non-governmental recreation agencies. A questionnaire was sent to 285 Councils of Social Agencies, and its findings are based on replies received from 113 of these. The study covers the growth of public services, the reason for and membership in local Councils, discussion of principles which might well be followed in determining the membership of Councils and the field of their activities. It also discusses the organization structure of the Councils and the methods which they use in making their contribution to local social planning. Although there may be some conclusions and recommendations which may not be acceptable in full to public recreation agencies, the material brought together should be of help to public officials in understanding Councils of Social Agencies and in developing the fullest possible cooperation with them.

Teen Centers—Some Special Problems

Womans Press, 600 Lexington Avenue, New York 22, N. Y. 60 cents.

DIRECTORS OR LEADERS of teen centers or other youth groups will find this booklet stimulating and useful in group discussion among staffs. Questions of discipline, attitudes of the youngsters and the leaders, problems within the agency, and within the community are discussed frankly and objectively. An intelligent, well-written booklet. Very much recommended.

Your Community—Its Provision for Health, Education, Safety and Welfare

By Joanna C. Colcord. Revised by Donald S. Howard. Russell Sage Foundation, 130 East 22nd Street, New York, N. Y., 1947. $1.50.

THIS IS A REVISION of the original publication by Joanna C. Colcord, first issued by the Russell Sage Foundation in 1939. It includes specific suggestions for a study of local community problems and has been particularly helpful to local groups for self-study purposes. It covers general community factors, local government, public safety, employment conditions, housing, health, hospitalization, education, recreation, relief, and similar phases of community activity.

A thorough revision by Dr. Donald S. Howard, Director of the Department of Social Work Administration of the Russell Sage, has taken into full consideration lessons in community study and planning brought out during the war and the immediate postwar periods. The section on recreation covers unorganized recreation, organized recreation provisions by governmental and non-governmental organizations, commercial recreation, and suggestions for planning community-wide recreation service.

Handbook of Games

By Neva L. Boyd. H. T. FitzSimons Company, Inc., Chicago, Illinois. $2.

THE GAMES IN THIS HANDBOOK are suitable for all occasions and types of play groups whether young or old, confined to home quarters or having the use of the wide open spaces. Descriptions of the games are complete in detail, and designed to be easily followed. Compiled in this collection are musical chairs, charades, Mother Cary's chickens, dodge ball, mumblety-peg, racing games, intellectual games, tricks and puzzles—over 300 games of a wide variety.

A Treasury of Play Ideas for Tiny Tots

By Caroline Horowitz. Hart Publishing Company, New York. $1.

THIS COLORFULLY illustrated manual of play actvities for tiny tots will amuse the two to six-year-olds—and their elders. The author has dreamed up some wonderful play ideas with such ordinary household articles as pots and spoons, buttons and thread, clothespins and soap. Most anything around the house can change magically into a toy or game that will keep children enchanted for hours. Adults may be called upon to make some simple play object, but sustained participation is not required. Paper wigwams and gliding airplanes, cardboard animals, soap boats that float in the calm of bath-tub waters and all the other amusements are completely safe and leads of fun.

†Miss Dauncey is the Katherine F. Barker Memorial Field Secretary on Athletics and Recreation for Women and Girls.

"ONCE upon a time, the citizens of a certain city in Greece were greatly interested in the nurture and training of children. When the question arose as to whether they should build a great public school or open a playground, it was decided to open a playground. Now, in the course of years, it came to pass that the citizens of that city advanced so far beyond the rest of the human race that in all the centuries since the nations that have gone on building public schools and neglecting to open playgrounds have not been able to catch up with them."
